Who knows public schools best?

1. Students
2. Families
3. Educators
4. Elected Officials
Educators have an unprecedented opportunity to be part of decisions about education – at the school, district, and state levels!
Your experiences with students provides invaluable insight that your district can use to make decisions about how resources are allocated for students.
You are a critical stakeholder in school improvement—not just a box to check! Take your seat at the table and raise your voice on behalf of your students.
