

State Teacher Salary Benchmark Data Highlights for:

These highlights (and the tables that follow) of teacher state salary benchmark data provide totals and averages for only those districts where salary data were reported.

- Teacher salary data were collected for 11,675 of 14,007 districts of record. This constitutes a reporting rate of 83%. The data from all reporting districts account for 94% of all full-time equivalent professional educators.
- The average 2017-2018 starting salary (BA Min) for the 11,675 reporting districts was $39,249. This represents an increase of 1.42% over the 2016-2017 reported average of $38,701.
- After adjusting for inflation, beginning teacher salaries have decreased by 2.91 percent since 2008-2009.
- 4,310 districts offer a 2017-2018 starting teacher salary of at least $40,000. This represents 37% of reporting districts. 60% of teachers are employed by districts with a starting salary of at least $40,000.
- 288 districts pay beginning teachers less than $30,000.
- At $51,443, New Jersey boasts the highest average starting teacher salary among the 50 states. 99.8% of New Jersey school districts pay a starting salary of at least $40,000.
- Hawaii's single statewide school district pays its beginning teachers $46,790. All school districts in Maryland and Wyoming offer a starting salary of at least $40,000.
- At $45,197, the highest reported average starting salary is found in the Northeast. The South reports the lowest average BA Min ($36,723).
- 75.5% of districts in the Northeast region report a starting teacher salary of at least $40,000, compared to only 19.4% of reporting districts in the Midwest region.
- At $42,927, the average starting salary for an educator with a master's degree is 9.4% higher than the beginning pay for a teacher possessing only a bachelor's degree.
- Excluding off-schedule longevity payments, the average top pay for teachers is $72,631, or 85.1%, higher than the minimum salary.
- Though 855 districts offer a maximum salary of at least $100,000, 1,027 still pay their highest paid teachers less than $50,000.
- School districts in pre-Janus right-to-work states pay starting teachers $5,676 less than districts in non-right-to-work states. Top pay for teachers in right-to-work states is $20,105 less than it is for those working in non-right-to-work states.
- The beginning salary of teachers in states with a bargaining law is $2,333 more than in states without a bargaining law. Top pay is $11,679 higher in states with a bargaining law.

Technical Notes 2017-2018

NEA's Collective Bargaining and Member Advocacy (CBMA) department annually collects teacher salary data for public school districts across the US. Five data points, or benchmarks, on the professional educator salary schedule, or guide, are collected: BA Min - The salary paid to a teacher, or other professional educator, with a bachelor's degree and no prior experience; BA Max - The highest pay a teacher can earn on the bachelor's lane, or column, on the salary schedule, excluding off-schedule longevity payments; MA Min - The salary paid to a teacher with a master's degree and no prior teaching experience; MA Max - The highest pay a teacher can earn on the master's lane, excluding off-schedule longevity payments; and, Max - The highest earning experience step and lane on the salary schedule, excluding off-schedule longevity payments.

For the purposes of this report, any reference made to "teacher" is inclusive of all certificated professional educator positions (e.g., guidance counselors, librarians, etc.).

The salary data are obtained from a variety of sources, including NEA state affiliates, state departments of education, and school district and local affiliate websites. The primary data source for each state are described on the next page of this report.

The salary data for New Mexico is for the 2018-2019 school year.

District enrollment, teacher FTE and school district typology data were downloaded from the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) for 2015-2016.
