

Meet Matthew Yuro

Hello AE Family! My name is Matthew Yuro (he/him), and I am a graduate student at The College of New Jersey, earning my Master of Arts in Teaching in Special Education. I earned my Bachelor of Science in Elementary Education and History from TCNJ in 2025. I currently serve as a NEA Board of Director and am seeking reelection for a one-year term for the 2025-26 year. Over the past year, I have grown into this role by lobbying on Capitol Hill and advocating for critical issues facing our education system. With rising attacks on public education, we need strong, committed advocates more than ever. I've proudly represented over 40,000 aspiring educators nationally, attending NEA conferences and working with the board to promote, protect, and strengthen public education. I will continue to show up and show out as a director, as my track record has proven, and use my voice to advocate for the needs of aspiring educators. We are at a pivotal moment, and I am ready to continue being a bold leader and passionate changemaker in this fight. Together, we can lead the charge toward a more equitable and diverse education system for all.
