For NEA executive Committee

Fierce Leadership. Real Results.

- Solutions that deliver
- Equity and inclusion in every fight
- Lifting up voices too often unheard
- Showing up. Standing strong. Never backing down.

I've spent 32 years in schools and 25 years as a union leader — listening, showing up, and fighting alongside members every step of the way.

As a counselor, I lead with empathy and courage. I build collective power by bridging differences, delivering meaningful results, and staying grounded in the challenges members face. Living wage successes include strike readiness campaigns with 75%+ turnout and a Red for Ed Action with 95% turnout, securing $2 billion in education funding.

In today's political environment, we need leaders who know how to turn priorities into action. I'm ready to keep fighting for us — because what we do together matters more than ever.

Why I Want to Serve

Every member deserves someone in leadership who understands both the classroom and the complexity of national advocacy. I believe in leadership that listens, acts, and never forgets where they came from. I've walked picket lines, written policy, and helped members navigate crises. I want to help build a union that protects the heart of public education while standing firm against the forces trying to silence it.

What People Are Saying

"The compassion Elizabeth has for our students and our members is inspiring. Every issue that comes before Elizabeth is met with thoughtful deliberation and action. She is a great listener who goes above and beyond to gather input from members to guide her decision making. It has been a true privilege to work side by side with such a dedicated and effective leader."

- Hanna Vaandering
Past NEA Executive Committee

"Elizabeth is driven by her passion for our people, our causes, and our democratic processes. As a counselor, she understands and supports students in a holistic way, and is that rarest kind of leader who truly seeks to serve others."

- Paul Lemle
President of Maryland State Education Association
